Building Ecosystem to Create Innovation in Life Science

LINK-J (Life Science Innovation Network Japan) builds platforms centered in Nihonbashi for networking and exchanging information with people around the world. We serve people involved in life science research and its industry in the broad sense including preventative, presymptomatic and health and longevity medicine such as regenerative medicine, precision medicine, drug development, medical devices and healthcare IT.

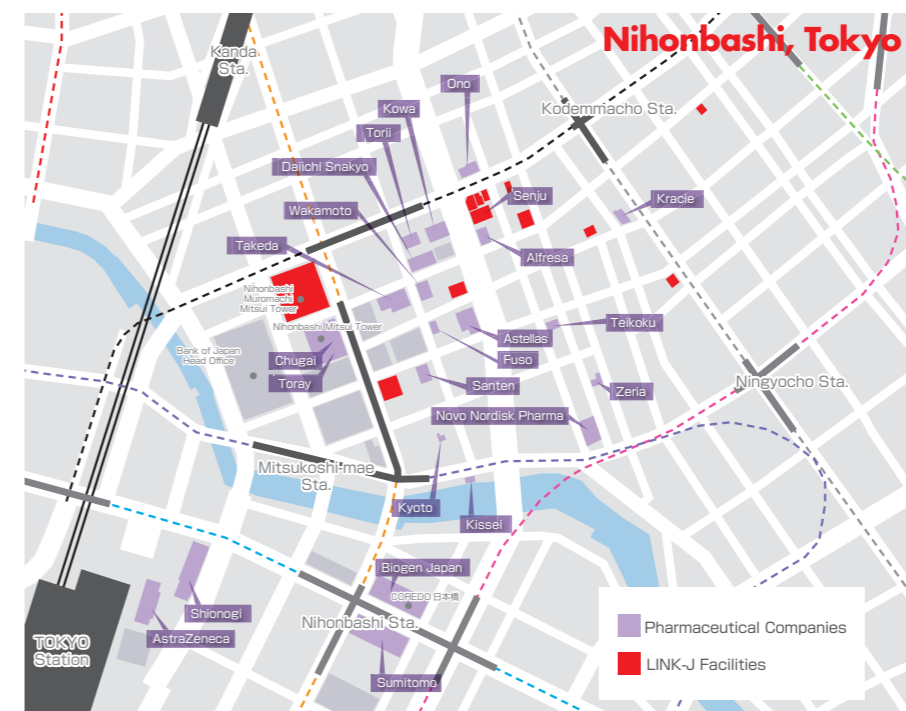

By encouraging the activation and creation of an innovative life science industry in Japan and the world, we contribute to the larger vision of a society where we can live healthily and happily.

Meet with key operators. Attend events & programs to aid product development of your concepts.

Nihonbashi, Tokyo and Doshomachi, Osaka have been pharmaceutical districts for 400 years.

LINK-J is based in Nihonbashi, the historic area of Tokyo where Japan's leading pharmaceutical companies were headquartered in for the past 400 years and where expertise in the life science field come together.

Nihonbashi is located in central Tokyo, where information, people and investors meet from all over the world. Visitors enjoy the urban environment which gives them access to many commercial and accommodation. We create and distribute information from Nihonbashi, this historically and geographically unique place.

Many top Japanese Pharmaceuticals have their roots in Doshomachi, Osaka. There are also many excellent life sciences related to universities and research organizations in this area. LINK-J further accelerates the real exchange between people across fields in this area where a variety of life science-related businesses, such as pharmaceutical, medical equipment, regenerative medicine, and health related service, are being developed through the mutual cooperation between industry, academia and government.
